

World Markets in Review 2007 Speaker Bios

Mary Duhig, Director, Aon Trade Credit

Mary Duhig is Director for Aon Trade Credit. In her current position, Mary is responsible for marketing and structuring credit and political risk mitigation solutions for domestic and global companies. Prior to joining Aon in 1999, Mary was Manager, Latin American Operations for Case Corporation. While at Case, Mary managed a team of finance professionals who were responsible for structuring cross border and in-country financing facilities to support equipment sales. Based in Chicago, Mary has extensive international and domestic financial experience with both capital equipment companies and banks. Mary has traveled extensively to the Middle East, Africa, Europe and Latin America to structure financing facilities. Ms. Duhig currently serves on the Advisory Board of FCIB (Finance Credit and International Business), an affiliate of the NACM National Association of Credit Managers. Mary earned her BA from Bradley University and her MBA from Loyola University.

Roger S. Schwartz, Senior Vice President, Aon Trade Credit

As a senior vice president, Aon Trade Credit, Roger S. Schwartz leads the group's political risk practice in the United States. In this role, Schwartz is responsible for providing political risk management advice to companies doing business around the world, including risk identification and analysis, program design, market negotiation and placement, and product development. Additionally, he is also responsible for the servicing and renewal of the political risk and global credit programs for a number of Aon's multinational clients. Schwartz originally joined Aon Trade Credit in 1983, but left in 1991 to join The Unistrat Corporation of America, where he served as senior underwriter in the U.S., underwriting political risk insurance. Roger rejoined Aon Trade Credit in December 1993. A certified insurance producer, property and casualty, in 18 states, he graduated from Manhattanville College with a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science and International Relations, and earned a Master of International Affairs from Columbia University's School of International Affairs. Schwartz is a veteran of the United States Marine Corps.